Scientific Partners:
joining the Smithsonian community

In partnership with the National Science Foundation's Louis Stokes Alliances for Minority Participation and the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of Natural History
The Museum will host a one-week winter workshop January 7-12, 2001

featuring the theme:

"Scientific Partners: joining the Smithsonian community."

Forty students and administrative representatives nominated for participation by LSAMP Centers across the country will convene at the Museum to learn more about natural history science and to share their insights into how the Museum can actively participate in encouraging more African American, Hispanic, and Native American students to achieve degrees and careers in the natural history sciences.

We hope you can join us for some of the activities.
